BULLETIN

VOL. VI, No. 6

Views of Campus and Buildings

Greencastle, Indiana, under the Act of August 24, 1912

FOREWORD

THE purpose of this booklet is to make DePauw more real in the minds of those who have not visited her campus by enabling them, through pictures, to visualize her buildings and grounds.

It is hoped that it may arouse an interest which will cause those to whom it comes to investigate DePauw and learn of the many fine things which can not be presented in pictures.

To former students and alumni it will suggest associations which have made possible for them a larger success and a richer life.

To you, who are prospective students, however, the value of DePauw will be found not alone in her buildings and campus, important as these are, but in the effective use which is made of these instruments in meeting present-day needs. More significant than buildings or equipment are faculty, student-body, and curriculum and the relation or attitude of each to the others. These make the spirit of the Institution and in them you will be most interested. We shall be glad to send you a catalogue, upon request, which will outline the courses of study and give more detailed information than may be found in this bulletin. It will also record the names of the faculty and students but to know them you must

SOME PLACES AND EXTRA CLASS-ROOM ACTIVITIES WHICH MAKE COLLEGE LIFE ATTRACTIVE

"DEEMING next to the religion of the Son of God the lights of Science best calculated to lessen human woe and to increase the sum of human happiness" the founders of Indiana Asbury University in 1837 established an Institution "forever to be conducted on the most liberal principles, accessible to all religious denominations". The achievements of many illustrious alumni through the succeeding years proves how well founded were their convictions. The location of the University at Greencastle because of its great beauty, easy accessibility and healthfulness is an enduring testimony to their wisdom.

In recognition of the generous gifts of Mr. Washington C. DePauw the name was changed to DePauw University in 1884. Supported from the beginning not only by the self-sacrificing gifts of many, but by the prayers of its benefactors and their unfailing faith in its high purpose, the College has prospered. Its present splendid buildings and equipment are evidences of the confidence of its alumni and friends in its permanence. And with the growth in "plant" has gone also a steady increase in endowment until now it stands among the foremost institutions of the Middle West.

DePauw is old enough to have stability yet young enough in spirit to be progressive; old enough to possess well-grounded traditions of the past, yet young enough while training its sons and daughters for the tasks of today to look forward with them to the needs of a tomorrow of happy promise.

DePauw is large enough to afford many and varied interests and activities, yet small enough to make possible close fellowship between the students and intimate contact between students and faculty.

The life of the campus is democratic in the best sense. A student is judged by what he is rather than by what he has. As compared to institutions of equal rank the expenses of the student at DePauw are very moderate, yet the life is in no sense "cheap". Endowed chairs of instruction guarantee the ablest teaching and the opportunities for a high type of social life are alike open to all. Through the beneficence of Mr. Edward Rector four hundred free scholarships have been established. The amount available under each of these scholarships is sufficient to cover all fees of the University. Selection is made by the Committee on the Edward Rector Foundation from candidates recommended by their high-school principals. In addition to these scholarships other means are at hand whereby worthy students of promise may receive help.

Much of value is to be gained from the activities of the campus which are apart from the regular courses of instruction. The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. hold regular meetings in Dougherty Hall and carry out a comprehensive program of work each year. The affairs of the student-body are governed by the Student Council, which is composed of representatives of the students regularly elected by them. Each class also has an organization giving opportunity for the development of qualities of leadership. The University Choir, the Orchestra, the Band and the Men's and Women's Choruses enable those who have musical talent to develop it under able instruction.

The Daily, the Mirage and the DePauw Magazine are student enterprises and are published by students who are interested in journalism and literary work. The National journalistic fraternity, Sigma Delta Chi, was founded at DePauw and still maintains a thriving Chapter.

Duzer Du, the dramatic society, presents, from time to time, plays written by its own members or the works of well-known playwrights. Election to the society is upon the basis of merit demonstrated by competitive trials in which any who will may participate.

The Endowed Lectureships bring to the University the ablest speakers and best thinkers of the times for various series of addresses on subjects of current interest which are free to all students.

The recitals and concerts of the School of Music are usually free to all students of the University, who are thus given the privilege of hearing many distinguished artists.

Greek letter societies have existed in the University since 1845 and at present nearly a score of national organizations, both for men and women, are represented. Each of them occupies a home either owned by the organization or leased. Two of the national women's societies, Kappa Alpha Theta and Alpha Chi Omega, were founded at DePauw, and many of the chapters rank very high in their respective national organizations.

Athletics are vigorous and clean. Varsity teams in baseball, football, track, basketball and tennis have built a reputation for speed, skill, endurance and fearless determination which makes DePauw a feared and respected contestant among her athletic rivals. The coaching staff is excellent and the teams, chosen by the head coach, are invariably made up of men who have demonstrated superior ability. Merit is the sole basis on which teams are chosen, eligibility, of course, being a prerequisite. No outside influence may be brought to bear to secure recognition for a player who does not deserve it. Nor may an athlete continue to represent DePauw unless he has made, and is making, a creditable record as a student.

Amid the many diversions and activities of college life the emphasis is kept on the right things and the main purpose of a college is not forgotten. These are a few of the reasons why you should
